

Student and Scientist Partnerships Conference (SSP) Report

Student and Scientist Partnerships (SSPs) are a new form of collaboration between science and education based on the ability of students to contribute to scientific research. This report from the 1996 conference presents an introduction to SSPs, a sampling of partnerships, and recommendations from scientists and educators for future research and development.